Introduction.

THE several Visitations of Shropshire, usually so called, were taken in the years 1569, 1584, 1623, and 1664.

The first of these is MS. G 9 in the College of Arms, and is called "The booke of the gatherings of Churches halls and howses." It relates to the counties of Gloucester and Hereford, as well as to Salop, and does not look like a Visitation.* No Herald's name is given in the MS., but it is said to be the work of Robert Cooke, Clarenceux King of Arms. Alexander Evesham had a copy of this manuscript made, which is now Harl. MS. 615, and is included in the following pedigrees. It is thus described in the printed Catalogue of the Harleian Manuscripts :

A book in fol. fairly written, in the first Leaf whereof are the following words, Genealogyes of Gentlemen of Hereford, Wooster, Gloster & Shropshire, taken by Robert Cooke Clarenceux King of Herald, at his Visitation of the same Sheres, 1569. And copyed out of their several Pedgrees subscrybed by everye gentleman of the Same Sheres ; At the charge of me Alexander Evesham."

The second of the manuscripts (MSS. G 15 and D 10 in the College of Arms) is called "Pedigrees of Shropshire Gentry," and does not appear to have been a Visitation proper, though so called in the Herald's College list. This so-called Visitation is also embodied in the following pages from Harl. MS. 1241, which is thus described in the printed Catalogue of the Harleian Manuscripts :

An Heraldical Book in fol., thus entituled,

A copie of the Visitation of Shropshire, taken & made by Richard Lee, alias Richmond Herald, & Marshall to Robert Cooke (William Hervey) alias Clarenceux Kinge of Armes ; taken in the yeare of our Lord God 1564 [1564]. Augmented by many Notes and Gatherings of Lewis Dunne and others, by me Jacob Chaloner of London Gentleman, untill the yeare 1620. Copied by me Thomas Hanford of Wigmore, Anno 1661.

* The Editors desire to thank GEORGE WILLIAM MARSHALL Esq., LL.D., F.S.A., Rouge Croix Pursuivant of Arms, for this and other information relating to the Shropshire Visitations.

I am apt to believe that the Date of the Visitation last mentioned may be mistaken, and that it should be 1584. For Mr Weever ('Fun. Mon.,' p. 673) sheweth that Mr Robert Cooke was made Clarenceux A.D. 1566, nor was Richard Lee, from Portcullis, created Richmond Herald until the year 1584. Besides Mr Withie's Book in this Library 81 B 12 and other good Copies, ascribe this Visitation to Richard Lee, Portcullis, and affirm that he took the same A.D. 1584.

And as the date of 1564, seems not to be right; so I suspect that Mr Hanford may not have been the most accurate Copyist in some other places; not but that the Book being a Painter's Book only (wherein the Seals and other Proofs of Descents are almost intirely omitted) may upon divers occasions prove of good use."

The third of the so-called Visitations of Shropshire contains 160 pedigrees, and is MS. C 20 in the College of Arms. It was taken in the year 1623 "by Rob<sup>t</sup> Treswell Esqr Somerset & Aug. Vincent Rouge Croix," who were Marshals and Deputies to William Camden, Clarenceux King of Arms. This Visitation forms the basis of the following pages, and Harl. MS. 1396 has been transcribed for that purpose. The printed Catalogue describes this MS. as follows:

A book in fo. for the most part written and tricked by the hand of Mr John Withie and by him entitled

1. The Visitation of Shropshire made & taken by Robert Tresswell Somersett & Augustine Vincent, Rouge Croix, officers of Armes Marshalls & Deputies to William Camden Esq. Clarenceux, King of Armes, Anno 1623. Together with the Visitation made by Richard Lee, Portcullis, Marshall & Deputie to Robert Cooke Clarenceux, King of Armes, Anno Domini 1584 with other Collections (or additions) made by me John Withie.

Here it may be noted that these two Visitation Books are not to be understood as if the one was kept distinct from the other; but rather that the fresh Descents taken A.D. 1623 do supply the former Visitation of A.D. 1584.

That this being transcribed from the original book Mr Withie has imitated the hands of those gentlemen who gave the Information in Anno 1623. That the above mentioned officers being men of Learning & Judgement: here are copies & Extracts of the private Evidences of divers antient Shropshire families: the Seals whereof as also the Arms, all along, are well tricked by Mr Withie. That divers of the Descents are not of Mr Withie's hand, but are done by Jacob Chaloner, & others employed by him.

Moreover, in this book, I observe

2. The original Paper, containing the hands of those, who during this Visitation of A.D. 1623 did disclaim the Titles of Esquire and Gentlemen, at Oswaldestre: by subscribing to a Preamble written by Mr Withie, who rode Painter at the same Visitation.

At the beginning

3. Arms of some of the Shropshire Gentlemen putt down by way of Alphabet.
fo. 2.

4. Tricks of the Seales of the Towne of Brugenorth. fo. 18.
  5. Labour'd Pedegree of Bromleigh or Bromley, as the same was attested by Robert Cooke Clarenceux & Robert Glover Somerset A.D. 1583. fo. 36.
  6. Some very modern Continuations, made perhaps by Mr Robert Dale, now Suffolk Herald & others before the Book came hither. ff. 41, 43, 251, 432.
  7. Some late Continuations have been made by Mr John Withie himself: as at fo. 160<sup>b</sup> after fo. 190<sup>b</sup>. fo. 439.
- By my Lord's Command Mr James Greene Blewmantel Poursuivant at Arms, did enter a Pedegree of Corbet &c. into this Book beginning at fo. 53<sup>b</sup>, and also put the Persons Names in the Index.
8. Part of Descent of Harnage, by the hand of Mr Richard Mundy, is placed betw. ff. 165<sup>b</sup> & 166.
  9. Descent, Funeral Certificate & Arms of David Lloyd of Shrewsbury: taken from the Pedegree of David Lloyd of Shrewsbury & Stafford. inter ff. 259 & 260.
  10. Trick of the Seale of the Towne of Bishops Castle. 52<sup>b</sup>.
  11. An old Painting of the Arms of Pytt. inter ff. 313<sup>b</sup> & 314.
  12. Copie of the Proclamation of Richard Lee, Portcullis dated the 12th of Sept. 1584, whereby he disclaimed many residing within the Towne & Liberties of Salop, the Hundred of Oswestry, Chirbury, Condover, Pimhill, Clunne, Foord & Bradford, as Usurpers of the Appellations of Esquire & Gentlemen.
  13. Alphabetical Table of the Surnames of those Families whose Descents are to be found in this Book. At the end."

There is another copy of the Visitation of 1623 in the School Library at Shrewsbury, and by the kindness of the School Committee we have been able to incorporate a collation of this interesting MS. in the present volume, which therefore consists of Harl. MS. 1396, with additions from Harl. MSS. 615 and 1241, and from the Shrewsbury MS., and comprises the Visitations of 1569, 1584, and 1623. To distinguish these various MSS., Harl. MS. 1396 is printed in ordinary Roman type, the additions from Harl. MS. 1241 are printed in italics, the additions from Harl. MS. 615 are printed in italics within parentheses, and the additions and variations taken from the Shrewsbury MS. are printed in italics within square brackets. Other variations are explained in the footnotes, and additions by the Editors are printed in ordinary Roman type within square brackets.

The copy of the Visitation of 1623, which is preserved in the Shrewsbury School Library, is a large folio manuscript, written on very thick paper. At the beginning of the volume there are eight leaves of trickings of the arms of various local families. After these come 308 leaves of pedigrees which, in most cases, are written on both sides of the leaves, with the arms neatly tricked, and where representations of seals are given they are more carefully executed than the arms. After the pedigrees there follows a large quantity of blank leaves, on one or two of which appears a fragment of a list of arms, evidently such as occur in the Salop district; this seems to have been copied from another list, for the arms are roughly arranged in alphabetical order, and only the first three or four letters have been entered. At the very end of the book is the Proclamation and List of Disclaimers, dated 20th September 1623, appended to which is a pencil note, signed "Isaac Heard, Lancaster Herald, 1 July 1766," declaring these four leaves to be in the writing of R. (sic) Warburton, Somerset Herald. John Warburton was Somerset Herald from the year 1720 until his death in 1759.

This manuscript is stated to have come from the library of John Warburton, Somerset, and to have been bought by Richard Hill Waring, Esq., Recorder of Oswestry from 1764 to 1798, who sold it to Jonathan Scott, of Shrewsbury, Esq., and he presented it to the School Library in the year 1766. Pencil notes, signed "Is. Heard, Lancaster Herald," occur in the Acton pedigree at fo. 16, where, in July 1764, he declares certain additions to the pedigree to be in the handwriting of R. Warburton, Somerset Herald; and again, at fo. 45, where the Bromley pedigree is stated to be in the handwriting of John Philipot, Somerset Herald, who obtained that office in 1624. We have, therefore, these several clear dates: John Philipot 1624, John Warburton died 1759, the pencil memoranda ranging from July 1764 to July 1766, when the volume would be in the possession of either Waring or Scott, and the presentation of the manuscript to the School in the last-mentioned year. It is to be noticed that the pedigrees of Albaney, Blunden, Bauldwyn, and Barnfield are all signed in the Shrewsbury MS., whilst those of Albaney, Bauldwyn, and Barnfield are not signed in the Harleian MSS. It is remarkable also that these signed pedigrees occur very early in the volume. Copyists became very expert in imitating the various signatures; the three Bauldwyn signatures for instance, at folios 25<sup>b</sup> and 26, are so different and ingenuous that it is hard to think they are not originals, and perhaps Sir Isaac Heard may have been in this way deceived when he declared parts of the manuscript to be in the handwriting of Philipot.

Another copy of the Visitation of 1623, with additions and continuations by Morris, may be seen in the Shrewsbury Free Library. Morris says, on his title-page, "Two other copies I have seen differ: one, now penes Sir Henry Edwards Bart was made by Isaac Richardson painter & deputy to the King of Arms 1705; but that from which I transcribed these pedigrees & drew the arms is in the Shrewsbury Free School Library, to which it was presented by Jonathan Scott of Shrewsbury, Esq., in 1766, he having bought it for £5 5s. from Richard Hill Waring, Esq., who bought it at a sale for a similar sum. It came from the Library of John Warburton, Esq., Somerset Herald."

Another copy of the same Visitation, in the possession of R. Jasper More, Esq., and preserved at Shipton in Coverdale, Salop, is thus described by Mr. H. Maxwell Lyte in the Report of the Historical Manuscripts Commission: "Transcript of a book formerly in the possession of Lord Newport at Eyton, co. Salop, containing the Visitation of the County made by Rob<sup>t</sup> Tresswell, Somerset, and Augustin Vincent, Rouge Croix, in 1623, that made by Richard Lee, Porteuillis, 1584, and certain other genealogies." (Salop Archaeological Society, vol. x.)

It is almost needless to discuss the date of the Visitation of 1623, as it appears plainly in the dating of the various pedigrees; but, since in at least two works it is erroneously stated to have been taken in 1624, it may be well to give the funeral certificate of the learned Camden, by whose Marshals and Deputies the Visitation was taken, from the Book of Funeral Certificates in the College of Arms, l 22, p. 90:

"W<sup>m</sup> Camden Esquier al's Clarenceux King of Armes of the East West and South parts &c. &c. being a bachelor departed this mortall life at Chis Ihurst in Kent the ixth daye of November 1623 being Sundaye in the morning about 4 or 5 of the clock. Testified by Doctor Heather."

Our Visitation therefore was Camden's last work; and Gough ('Topog.,' ii., p. 276) informs us that Robert Tresswell, Somerset, surrendered his office in 1624, and was succeeded by John Philipot.*

The last Visitation of Shropshire was taken in the year 1664 (MS. C 35 in the College of Arms), and does not come within the scope of the present volume.

To account for the great number of gentry in Shropshire and the bold and independent character which has gained for them the popular name of "proud Salopians," it is necessary that we give a hurried description of social arrangements in early times, from which no doubt these characteristics of the Shropshire gentry are derived. Situate on the disturbed borders of Wales, and holding in fee a large part of the Marches, the Barons were placed there with a very peculiar tenure; each had his castle subject to constant attack from the Welsh, and his estates extended to so much land as he could hold or capture from them; many of the charters by which they held their lands are so worded (Lansdowne MS. 216). Of necessity the men who accepted such a position and trust must have been, and their descendants must have grown up for generations, bold and self-reliant, in the constant expectation of war. The Lords of Manors were mostly Barons, and sat in Parliament, and in the Red Book of the Exchequer we find them called "Marchiones Walliæ" (Duke's 'Antiquities of Shropshire,' p. xii). Shropshire is the seat of Judicature for all North Wales, and all suits were tried at Shrewsbury.

Old Fuller (p. 254) tells us that out of 186 castles in all England,* thirty-two were in Shropshire; every manor-house must in fact have been like a castle, moated, and able to withstand sudden attack.

This constant state of unrest continued from the Norman Conquest till the death of Owen Glendwr in 1415. But the ferocity which necessarily grew out of such a state of society hung on in the district long after the Welsh were reduced to quietness, until two very remarkable men became Lords President of the Marches. These were Rowland Lee, Bishop of Lichfield and Coventry, and Sir Henry Sidney. The former was appointed in 1535, and by his governance the Marches were at length cleared of bands of robbers. Before his time it was not a very uncommon† thing for one of the gentry to collect a band, and capture and hold to ransom any neighbouring gentleman who it was supposed could pay for his delivery. By his influence and constant personal inspection for eight years Bishop Lee raised the moral tone of the whole district under his command. He died 24 January 1543, and was buried at Shrewsbury, leaving the Marches in a state of tranquillity and security, very different from that in which he had found them.

Six Lords President followed, colourless men who have left behind them no marks of labours bestowed during their short tenures of office, and it is a singular testimony to the discreet government of Bishop Lee that the Marches did not in this interval relapse again into barbarism. In 1559, however, the ever celebrated Sir Henry Sidney succeeded as Lord President, and to his admirable government of twenty-seven years, for he died 5 May 1586, Wales and the border districts owe even more than to that of Rowland Lee. He in fact completed the difficult task so admirably begun by his predecessor. But something even more powerful than good govern-

* The date at which Fuller wrote (1662) must be taken into account, for we have it on record that Henry II., at the beginning of his reign, ordered 1100 petty castles to be destroyed (Wright's 'History of Ludlow,' p. 50); these would not be on the Welsh or Scotch Marches, where protection against constant raids was required. Fuller's figures were taken from Speed, whose 'Historie' was published in 1611.

There is a paper by the late Rev. R. W. Eyton on the Castles of Shropshire in 'Collect. Genealogica,' 1861, reprinted in Salop Archaeological Society, vol. x.

Also in Cotton MS. Vespasian A. xviii., fo. 139, is given a list of the most important castles of Salop in early Henry III.'s time.

A paper on the Castles of England, by Mr. Geo. T. Clarke ('Archæological Journal,' vol. xxxix., p. 186), of course includes Shropshire, but only notices the most important ones.

† See Wright's 'History of Ludlow,' pp. 267-268 et seq., who obtains his information from the Rolls of Parliament.

ment was needed to tranquillize this district, which had continued in a constant ferment for ages, and that was the general prosperity of trade. In 1331 Edward III. introduced seventy families of clothworkers from Flanders (John Kempe and others) to teach the English weaving. From all ages British wool had been considered the best in Europe, and it had been largely exported for the foreign looms; but this trade of weaving, then introduced into England, had so enormously increased by the end of the fifteenth century that large areas of arable land were converted into pastures to supply the insatiable demand for wool.* Profitable farming lulled the angry passions which were hereditary in the Marches; the produce of Wales, brought on the backs of Welsh ponies (merlins as they were called), poured into Shrewsbury and Oswestry, and very great wealth was accumulated by the merchants who there dealt with such wool. This seems to have begun to be extensive about the middle of the fifteenth century, and so by the end of that century we find a great accretion of wealth in Shropshire.

Now let us glance for a moment at the general state of politics in England at this time. The Wars of the Roses were now ended, and had left many of the ancient feudal landholders in great embarrassment; their estates, encumbered by wars and pretentious extravagance, had to be broken up; and we find in Shropshire persons engaged in trade were ready to come forward and purchase. Many of these fortunate traders were cadets of ancient stems; others again were new names in Shropshire, introduced from Wales and the neighbouring counties. A List of the Gentry of Salop in 1433, given by Fuller in his 'Worthies,' p. 265, comprises only forty-five names.† In this present Work we find 375 families returning their pedigrees to the Heralds, while 95 were disclaimed, having the reputation of gentlemen, but not having attended to shew their right thereto; in all 470 families. We see how large a number of these successful "Merchants of the Staple" must have come forward to purchase and settle upon estates throughout the county. They were all necessarily com-brothers of the guilds established in the large towns, Shrewsbury, Ludlow, Oswestry, Newport, and Bridgnorth, and these were imbued with feelings of sturdy independence, and some of their leading * The woolstack on which the Lord Chancellor sits was first introduced on the passing of an act of Queen Elizabeth forbidding the export of wool. To keep ever in mind this source of our national wealth, woolstacks were placed in the House of Lords whereon the Judges sat.

This is thus referred to in 'A Discourse concerning the motives for the enlargement and freedom of Trade,' London, 1646: "The principal reason why in time of Parliament our Judges do sit in the House of Peers upon woolstacks is to put them in mind of preserving and advancing the trade and manufactory of wool."

members belonged to the Council of the Marches, a very honourable distinction.

On the decay and dismemberment of the ancient feudal nobility, and the dispersion portion by portion of their estates, these self-reliant and influential burghers, already connected more or less with the old landed proprietors, were ready at once to purchase and step into their estates, and their descendants became the now numerous body of proud Salopian gentry.

Before leaving this subject, it may be well to speak of the guilds, which, as a sort of trading parliaments, certainly helped to form a tone of intelligent independence. The principal one was "the Guild of Mercers, Ironmongers, and Goldsmiths of Shrewsbury;" its earliest books begin 3 Henry VI. (1424-5), and it had an elaborate "Composition" granted to it 20 Edward I. (1480-1). It admitted on to its rolls those of other trades; "poticaries" and "makers of cakes and junkets" are found in the lists, all seeking the protection of a great guild, as well as anxious from their membership to attain, after a certain interval, the rights of free burgesses. None could trade in the town or liberties without being a com-brother of one of these guilds. Very strict regulations were administered on all matters affected, the customs of the trades were declared and upheld, and, of course, the entry into a guild was by apprenticeship and a money fine. In 1476 it was enacted:

"No master to take any apprentice that is of French, Flemish, wild Irish, Dutch, Scot or any other nation, but only English born, on pain of 100<sup>s</sup>."

The council of this guild enjoyed very large influence, and many of the gentry of the county became members, paying a heavy extra fine, and undertaking not to trade. This no doubt was as a protection to them in those troublous times, but other reasons are shadowed forth in the following entry from the records:

"1529-30 Foulke Colle Gent made request forasmoeche as his Uncle Robert Colle was one of the fellowship that he might be accepted and taken in as a Combrother onely to have the pyrr of the p'est and pore people and to goo yearly in p'cession on Corpus Xi day and not to trade. Paid 16<sup>s</sup> 8<sup>d</sup>."

The simple state of society in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries did not draw lines of demarcation at retail trades; great foreign merchants, such as we now have, had not yet been developed. War as a profession for younger sons had ceased; also the custom of attaching them to the suites of the greater nobility, and the consequence was they could only enter the learned professions, or be apprenticed to some ordinary retail trade and so become members of one of these guilds; thus we find that the younger sons of extensive estates became tradesmen in the neighbouring towns, and did not thereby cease to be members of the county gentry.

One instance of this, drawn from the records of the Mercers' Guild, will be sufficient (see Visitation, p. 290): Katherine, daughter and coheir of Robert Knight of Basticouta and Shrewsbury, by his wife Elizabeth, daughter and coheir of Rowland Jaye of Jay, married, for her first husband, David Ireland (p. 270); all these belonged to the old gentry, and shewed shields with many quarterings. She afterwards married Robert Dudley, Esq., a half-brother of the Baron Dudley, who represented Shrewsbury in Parliament in 1530; but she did not cease to follow her first husband's trade of a dealer in iron, and we find in the Bailiff's Accounts for 1543: "Payd to Maysters Dudley for di C. of Irenn &c. ij<sup>s</sup> iiij<sup>d</sup> ij<sup>d</sup>." It was not a matter of need; at his death Robert Dudley must have been a wealthy man, for we find, by his will, proved 28 May 1539, that he left a sum of money to the Mercers' Company on condition that they find "an honest priest" to sing mass daily at the altar of St. Michael in St. Chad's Church; and of this bequest £33 6s. 8d. was applied by the Company 1540-1. (Salop Archaeological Society, viii., p. 400; William Salt Society, ix., p. 80.) This was a very large sum at that date, even supposing it to have absorbed the whole of the bequest. We can draw no other conclusion but this, that it was considered no detriment in those days for younger branches of the ancient gentry to occupy themselves with a retail trade, and to sell a half-hundredweight of iron to the Shrewsbury Corporation. Nice social distinctions are but of recent growth, and when we find a family putting forth the boast that they never had any connection with trade it only shews that they have not full records for the sixteenth, seventeenth, and eighteenth centuries; unless indeed, as sometimes happens, a family continued for several generations with very few sons.

Shropshire has always been largely agricultural. At the time of which we speak there was no manufacturing. The iron trade, which has since grown to large proportions, was confined to a few charcoal forges, and indeed to this day it must be considered mainly a pastoral county; such a district as would expand under the great demand for wool in the fifteenth century, and continue unchanged during the later developments of manufacturing which have in other counties led to extensive transfers of landed estates.

Referring with this inquiry to Mr. Shirley's valuable work on 'The Noble and Gentle Men of England,' we find in many counties only two or three families recorded. Staffordshire has but fifteen, Cheshire twenty, Devonshire twenty-one, Yorkshire with its large area only twenty-six, while Shropshire shews the largest total of any county, viz., twenty-eight families which have held their estates in the male line since the sixteenth century.

To recapitulate what we have now arrived at: forty-five feudal gentry of Shropshire in the list returned in 1433, the dismemberment of their great estates at the end of that century and during the first half of the sixteenth century, the great accumulation of wealth by trade from the middle of the fifteenth century, the investment of this wealth in estates, and we are quite prepared for the large number of gentry returned in our Visitation, viz., 470 summoned as bearing the reputation of gentlemen. If we compare this with the neighbouring county of Stafford, which was considered to have a very strong body of gentry, we find at the two Visitations of 1614 and 1633-4, as embodied by the William Salt Society (vol. v.), 244 pedigrees were returned and 169 disclaimed, making a total of 413 reputed gentry.

In comparing Visitations it must be borne in mind that in those of later dates numbers of new families, with only two or three generations, shewed an eagerness to record their names in the Heralds' books, and thus the totals became largely increased. It is well to remark that the Shropshire Visitation now before us does not give so accurately as we could desire the exact list of the Heralds' Visitation; some of the pedigrees have been unquestionably added from other sources, but it is also probable that some are wanting.

In Owen and Blakeway's 'History of Shrewsbury' (i., p. 380) is given a list of those families, numbering four, who returned themselves as residing "in Shrewsbury" at the 1569 Visitation; also at that of 1584, ten names; at page 404 thirty-four names are so given as residing "in" Shrewsbury at our Visitation 1623; and at page 484 twenty-seven families who are so returned at that of 1663. This suggests the impression that a great increase of the gentry resident within the town had at one time taken place, and requires some explanation. Shrewsbury proper is confined within the river and its own town walls; it is within 300 yards of being entirely an island! The important parish churches have a small extent of town proper, but the parishes attached to them extend for miles into the country. The area of the "City and Liberties" of Shrewsbury is estimated (Philips's 'History of Shrewsbury, 1779,' p. 152) at 10,000 to 12,000 acres. In Domesday Book Sciropesberie Hundred contained, as it does now, the town and liberties of Shrewsbury. An old Nomina Villarum et Villatorum et Hamblettorum intra libertates Villæ Salop' occurs in a Ledger Book in the Exchequer marked A. P. (post 11 Henry VII.), and gives the list as follows:

Eton juxta Pitchford, Betton Strange, Altemere, Sutton, Meole Bracy, Pullyley, Newbolde, Welbache, Whytley, Hanwood Magna, Hanwood Parva, Horton, Woodcote, Aldemere, Newton, Preston Gubbald, Lee, Herdwyk, Burghton, Yorton Allerton, Olyve, Sandsawe, Grylleshill, Acton Reynald, Hadnall, Edgbald, Meole

Monachorum, Schelton, Onnyslowe, Bykton, Rossal Parva, Calcote, Preston, Dynthyll, Leton, Wolascote, Berwyche Lebron, Berwyche Parva, Smethcote Haston, Adbright Husseye, Adbright Monachorum, Halescote, Astley, Adbrightleye, Battlefield, Pymley, Longnore, Derbald, and Hencote.

The gentry on this large extent of outlying estates would all return their pedigrees as within the "liberties of Shrewsbury"—an extensive tract of country 21 miles long by 14½ miles wide at its greatest dimensions. Sansaw in St. Mary's parish is 6½ miles N., Whitley in St. Chad's parish 4 miles S., Eton 6 miles S.W., Longnore 8 miles S., Lee 6 miles N., Grylleshill 7 miles N. of the city proper. New-made money, then as now, purchased a few hundred acres, a mere tithe in extent of the ancient holdings, and placed upon it a mansion, and hence the "city and liberties" were quickly covered with fine houses inhabited by a large number of gentry. Some of the more distant county families had town residences actually within the walls, and many fine old houses remain with the name of "mansion" or "place," coupled with that of the family which formerly occupied them.

We now proceed to shew whether the character thus ingrained by centuries of self-reliance in the Shropshire gentry may be traced in the competition of life.

Soldiers we cannot particularize; at one time all were soldiers, and it is the profession in which it is most difficult to say that one proficient excels another. We would only mention John, Lord Talbot, slain 17 July 1453. Fuller ('Worthies,' p. 260) describes him as "that terrible Talbot, so famous for his sword, a sword with bad Latin upon it, but good steel within it."

But we can gather up from our Visitation those mentioned as having attained legal eminence. Sir Robert Burnell, Lord Chancellor 21 Sept. 1274, of Acton Burnell. He continued in this high office for eighteen years, and has left his mark for ever by the enlightened reforms which under his auspices were introduced into the laws of England. The Parliament of 1283, held at Shrewsbury, was presided over by Sir Robert Burnell, where the celebrated statute "De Mercatoribus" was passed. During his tenure of office were also added to our laws, the Statute of Gloucester, 1278; the Statute of Mortmain, 1279; the Statute of Westminster, 1285; the Statute of Winchester, 1285; the Statute Circumspecte Agatis, 1285; the Statute quo Warranto, 1290; the Statute Quia Emptores, 1290; and the Ordinatio pro Statu Hiberniæ, 17 Edward I. Nine remarkable ordinances which have marked him out to all after ages as beyond doubt the most able man that ever held the office of Lord Chancellor.

Richard Burnell of the Irish branch of this family was Chancellor of Ireland, and died 1554.

Sir Thomas Bromley created Chief Justice of England 4 Oct. 1553; died 1555.

Sir Edward Bromley, Baron of the Exchequer 1609; died 1626.

Sir Thomas Bromley created Lord Chancellor 26 April 1579; died 12 April 1587.

Sir Robert Brooke created Chief Justice of Common Pleas 28 Oct. 1554; died 1558.

Hugo Burgh,* Grand Treasurer of England, mentioned at pp. 104, 135.

Reginald Corbett de Stoke, Justice of King's Bench in 1559; died 1566.

Sir Thomas Egerton created Lord Chancellor 6 May 1596; died 1617.

Sir Richard Fowler, Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster temp. Edward IV.

Sir Christopher Hatton created Lord Chancellor 29 April 1517; died 20 Nov. 1591.

Sir William Lacon, Justice of King's Bench 1466; died 6 Oct. 1475.

Christopherus Lacon, "unus Stipendiariorum R'næ Eliz.," mentioned p. 307, a title which is not quite clear.

Sir John Needham, Justice of King's Bench 1472.

Thomas Owen created Justice of Common Pleas 1593; died 1598.

Sir Roger Townshend made Justice of Common Pleas 29 Jan. 1484-5.

Sir Robert Townshend, his second son, Justice of Wales.

Sir Henry Townshend, third son of Sir Robert, Justice of Chester.

Sir George Vernon made Baron of Exchequer 13 Nov. 1627; died 16 Dec. 1639, buried in the Temple Church.

Sir Henry Wallop, one of the Lords Justices and Vice-Treasurer of Ireland 1582.

Edmund Walter, Chief Justice of South Wales; and his son,

Sir John Walter, born at Ludlow 1563, created Chief Baron of the Exchequer 12 May 1625, died 18 Nov. 1630, and was buried under a splendid monument at Wolverscote, near Oxford.

All these Salopians are mentioned in our Visitation as having attained to the highest legal positions, and among them we find three in the Bromley and three in the Townshend family.

* Phillips's 'History of Shrewsbury,' 4to, 1779, p. 144, relates that Hugo or Hubert de Burgh, a Chief Justice of England, made Vaughan's Place in Shrewsbury his town house, and that this portion of his estate came to the Mytton family (see the descent at p. 104), but we have failed clearly to trace who this Hugo or Hubert was. In 'Byegones relating to Wales and the Border Counties,' Oct. 1878, p. 119, a Hugh Burgh is mentioned as Sheriff of Salop in 1420, who was appointed by Henry V. Treasurer of Ireland, and founder of a great family there, but that does not seem to agree with our pedigree at p. 104.

We notice the occurrence of three Speakers of the House of Commons chosen from the Onslow family, viz.,

Richard Onslow, born 1528, Speaker 8 Eliz. (1563), died 1571, buried in St. Chad's.

Sir Richard Onslow, Bart., Speaker 8 Anne (1708), afterwards Lord Onslow.

Arthur Onslow, better known as "Speaker Onslow." He was elected 1727, and continued Speaker of the House for thirty-three years. This oversteps the boundaries of our Visitation, but seemed too remarkable to be omitted, and especially as it is unique in English family history.

We have six Bishops mentioned, viz.,

Robert Burnell, Bishop of Bath and Wells, and Lord Chancellor, died 1292.

William Grey, Bishop of London 1426, after of Lincoln 1431.

George Day, Bishop of Chichester, died 1556.

William Day, Bishop of Winchester, died 1596.

Edmund Fox, Bishop of Hereford, died 1535.

Richard Talbot, Archbishop of Dublin, died 1449.

One Confessor, Thomas Gataker, who died 1593, and his learned son Thomas Gataker. (Fuller's 'Worthies,' p. 256.)

Five Heralds more or less connected with the county, viz.,

Henry Chitting, Chester Herald (p. 310).

Robert Owen,* deputy to Clarenceux at this Visitation, buried 8 Nov. 1632 (p. 390).

John Raven, Richmond Herald (p. 176).

Francis Sandford, Lancaster Herald, died 1693 (p. 432).

John Yonge, Somerset Herald, died 1510 (p. 425).

But perhaps the best comparison between this and other counties may be drawn from trade. The younger sons we now refer to went out into the world to fight their way; their connection with old landed families had no direct influence on their success, that was entirely the result of individual character. We find the following Shropshire Lord Mayors of London:

Sir Roger Acherley, 1511.

Sir Rowland Hill, 1549.

Sir Thomas Lee, 1558.

Sir Thomas Lodge, 1562 (Kenrick Pedigree, p. 284).

Sir Rowland Heyward, 1570.

* There is a volume in the Free School Library, Shrewsbury, entitled "Armorial Bearings of the several Bailiffs and Mayors of Shrewsbury from 46 Edw. III. emblazoned, with MS. notes, by Robert Owen Gent a deputy herald." See also page vii

Sir Humphrey Weld, 1595 (not in the Visitation).

Sir Stephen Slaney, 1595.

Sir Robert Lee, 1602.

Sir Henry Billingsley, 1606.

John Swinnerton, 1612. He was son of Thomas Swinnerton of Oswestry (not in the Visitation).

Sir Francis Jones, 1620.

Peter Probey, 1622 (not in the Visitation).

Allen Cotton, 1625.

Sir George Whitmore, 1631.

Thomas Adams, 1646.

Fuller (p. 264) says "twelve in all: see here a jury of Lords Mayors born in this (which I believe will hardly be parallel'd in a greater) county, all (no doubt) honest men and true." We find in the above list fifteen Lord Mayors in 135 years. Surely a very large proportion for one county.

Before leaving this division of our subject we give the inscription on a brass representing the figures of a woman between two husbands which was formerly in St Alkmund's Church: "Hic jacet Joh'es Herecy et Joh'es Humfreston burgenses ville Salopie et Margeria uxor eor' et p'dict Joh'es Herecy obiit a' d'ni 1470, et p'dict Joh'es Humfreston obiit ultimo die me's Martii a' d'ni 1491, ac etiam Margeria uxor p'dictor' obiit . . . die mensis . . . a' d'ni 1500 quor' animabus p'piciet' de' ame'." It will be noticed that the date is not 1497 as given on p. 263. The startling abruptness with which she is described as uxor eorum or prædictorum is characteristic of the downright simplicity of those times.

A remarkable instance of a lady having married two Richard Owens occurs in this Visitation. At p. 364, Katherine, daughter of Thomas Montgomery, p. 391, married first Richard Owen, Bailiff in 1559 [Arms: Sable, three nags' heads erased argent]. At p. 397, Hugo Philips of Kuersous married Elizabeth, daughter of Richard Owen and Katherine his wife, "fil. Ric' (sic) Montgomery." This Richard Owen was the son of Owen ap Gruff of Llundlo by Gwen, daughter of Thomas Ireland [Arms: Argent, a lion rampant sable]. Katherine, his widow, administered to this second Richard Owen's will, which was proved in the P.C.C. 2 January 1576.

Many ancient gravestones found in St. Alkmund's, St. Chad's, and St. Julian's were removed when those churches were rebuilt, and were placed in country churches near to which the descendants of the persons commemorated had purchased estates. As a contrast to the above crude inscription we quote an unusually beautiful epitaph on the tomb of John Gardiner of Sansaw, dated 1628, in St. Mary's Church (see p. 196):

*"Gratia Sancta Dei, tibi fulsit, chara Johannes !
 Ex re nomen habes : hoc tibi vita probat.
 Horti Cultor eras : tibi Cura, sologue poloque
 Plantas egregias addere summa fuit.
 Resurgentis letitia,
 Hinc surgo : properat Mediator in uire Christus Obvius huic raptor : semper eroque comes."*

Thus skilfully rendered :

"John is the 'grace of God,' to thee it came ;
 Thy character depicted in thy name,
 A Gardener too : 'twas thine with anxious care,
 For earth and heaven new scious to prepare.
 The deceased speaks,
 I rise : my Saviour meets me through the sky :
 To dwell with Him, I mount, no more to die !"

But no translation could convey the subtle beauties evolved from the Latin.

It seems necessary now to consider the various circumstances and forms attending a Visitation, and the inquiry will no doubt throw light on many points which will be touched upon in succession, and the result cannot fail to be a more exact appreciation of the difficulties, expenses, shortcomings, and at the same time the extreme value, even with all their imperfections, of such Visitation Records. It is probable also we may thus more clearly understand the long lists of Disclaimers proclaimed after every Visitation.

The original proclamation by King Henry V., which was the first step towards Heraldic Visitations, was dated 2 June 1417 (printed in Mr. Grazebrook's 'Heraldry of Worcestershire,' p. xiv), and was to the effect that no man of what estate, degree, or condition soever should assume arms unless he held them by right of inheritance, or by donation of some person who had the power to give them, and that all persons should make it appear to officers to be appointed, by whose gift they enjoyed such arms, excepting those who had borne arms with the King at the battle of Agincourt. The College of Arms was not established until 1485.

At irregular intervals, when the Visitation of a county was determined upon, Clarenceux or Norroy King of Arms, armed with special powers by the Sovereign and the Lords of the Privy Council, issued his summonses to the Bailiffs of each Hundred or to the Mayors or other chief officers, commanding them to notify to each of the gentry, included in an accompanying list of names, that they should appear before his deputies at a certain place and on a certain day, in order that their pedigrees might be duly recorded, and their right to the arms and to the consequent title of "gentleman" be certified, and any irregularities corrected. Perhaps the fullest particulars we can have of this stage of the proceedings are printed in the 'Visitation of Staffordshire, 1583' (Wm. Salt Society, vol. v.), where copies of the warrants and directions are set forth. It will be noticed there that the deputies are only directed to inquire of "all such are called or wrytten Knights, Esquires, and Gentlemen;" the fact being that the Peerage was reserved to the care of Garter King of Arms, and to Norroy or Clarenceux was committed all of lesser rank, Clarenceux's Kingdom being South of the Trent, and that of Norroy to the North of that river. It is suggested as a complaint that these lists of reputed gentry were drawn up from the Sheriffs' or Under-Sheriffs' books, and therefore that they are nothing more than the names of such as were liable to serve on Juries and paid a certain taxation; and it is advanced by those who seek to depreciate the Heralds that they did not take sufficient account whether those individuals whom they summoned had been claiming the rank of gentlemen or had been using arms. After inquiring into this point, I have to say that the lists of those summoned, so far as we are able to examine them, were carefully and judiciously drawn up and out of a full knowledge of the districts; the names were supplied by the Heralds to the chief officers of the hundred or place, and were not left to them to fill up, although possibly their official knowledge would be made use of when drawing up these lists. The early Heralds had a much more accurate knowledge of such matters than would be possible in our days, when the assumption to belong to the rank of "gentry" is universal; those who then started such a claim became at once conspicuous. In the 'Visitation of London, 1633,' p. 190, occurs this note: "These arms made by Mr John Taylor of Fleet Street since Michaelmas last;" and I find instances are not infrequent in which such an intimate and exact acquaintance with details is disclosed. These accusations therefore do not seem to have any foundation in visible facts, but have arisen from the disappointment of some who, not finding their families recorded as they would desire, and unwilling to blame the neglect of their own ancestors, have sought to vent their spite on the Heralds, and have put forward suggestions which do not, on examination, seem to be true. This is a point we shall carefully examine presently.

The Heralds appointed as deputies, accompanied by their staff of registrar, scribes, and draughtsmen, proceeded in due time to sit, as announced, in the most convenient towns, to receive and record, as brought in to them by the neighbouring gentry, their descents, and to acknowledge, or respite, or refuse altogether the arms which might be put forward, according as the proofs submitted to them were satisfactory or not.

'Visitation of Staffordshire, 1583,' William Salt Society, vol. v., p. 3: "And these that may not commodiously bring wth them such their evidences, auncient writings, and monuments (sic) as would serve to prove the antiquitie of their race and familye, but shalbe desirous to have me home to their houses: upon the signification of such their desires for the furtherance of Her Ma<sup>m</sup>' service, I will make my repaire unto them soe soone as conveniently I maye." Every facility was therefore offered on the part of the Heralds to make their work complete.

The first question that naturally arises is, What fees were required? Randle Holme, in his 'Academy of Armory,' 1688, book i., chap. i., sec. 25, gives us the following information, and he was well acquainted with the customs of the College of Heralds:

"But the Kings of Arms their principal Fees are those of the Visitations of their Provinces: that is once in 20 or 30 years at the most they ride through their part of the Kingdom assigned to them: where (in certain places most convenient) they summon in all the Gentry, as Baronets, Knights, Esquires, Gentlemen, and Freeholders (or any whom he pleaseth to call before him) there to give an account unto them of their Family, Matches, Issues, Coats of Arms belonging to them, and their Title as Esquire, Knight, etc., all which is registered or recorded in a Book called the Visitation-Book for such and such a c<sup>o</sup>ty, taken at such a time. For which registring, travelling Expences and entertaining all his Visitors, the Kings of Arms, and his Marshall, demands from every Gentleman 25<sup>s</sup>, an Esquire 35<sup>s</sup>, a Knight or Baronet 55<sup>s</sup>. All which being summed up through the Kingdom, will amount to such a value as may sustain them, with good husbandry, till the next Visitation: but that is seldom twice in one King at Arms's life-time."

These fees do not seem to have been exactly adhered to in every county; on the fly-leaf of a MS. by Christopher Barker, Garter, relating to Norfolk and Suffolk, 1661, is this memorandum:

"For ye entring of every descent:

Every Gent.....	£1	7	6
An Esquire.....	1	17	6
A Knight . . . . .	2	7	6
A Baronett.....	2	17	6"

But the trifling difference only gives us confidence in the statement of Randle Holme. As a result of the Visitations, many new families would apply for and receive grants of arms, and "then a Fee accordingly of £10 or £20 is payable for Confirmation and granting such Coats of Arms and registring them among the gentry of that shire." (Randle Holme, sec. 24, book i., chap. i.)

The following from Brit. Mus. Add. MS. 14,294, fo. 110, is so curious that we add it to our notes on this subject of Heralds' remuneration:

"The number of Arms & Creasts granted by Sir Gilbert Dethick Garter, Singly, from y <sup>e</sup> 5 th yeare of Edward y <sup>e</sup> VI th An'o 1551 unto y <sup>e</sup> 10 th yeare of Eliz. An'o 1568 .....	Are about 57

The announcement of the approaching Visitation we know caused excitement, and in many cases alarm. The Heralds were armed with great authority, and it depended entirely on the character of the individual deputy whether this was used in an arbitrary manner, even to the extent of breaking down family monuments and destroying other heraldic devices, a power which Dugdale put into force in 1667. This extensive authority was declared 1528 ('Heraldry of Worcestershire,' p. xix), but we do not notice that it was exercised in the earlier Visitations. We know from the letter of Robert Greisbrooke of Shenstone, 23 March 1662 (preserved among Dugdale's papers at the College of Heralds, and printed William Salt Society, vol. v., p. 156), how he hastened to get a drawing of his arms prepared, the picture of them being at present with his sister Chamberlayne in Oxfordshire, although his arms had been more than once acknowledged by the Heralds, and Sir William Dugdale's sister had married Mr. Richard Seawall of Coventry, whose mother was a daughter of Alverey Greysbrooke of Stoke Hall. Sir William therefore would be well acquainted with the family bearings.

"Letters written to Dugdale shew that he possessed a sway equal to or almost superior to the authority of the secular sovereign." (Chetham Society, vol. lxxxiv., p. xii.) We can readily understand therefore how the old gentry, whose position was known and assured in their own district, might hesitate to submit their degree to the judgment of a stranger, who was himself judge and jury, and there was no appeal. It was not in human nature, at least not in the character of most men, to be thus exalted as the representatives of the Earl Marshal, and through him of the Crown itself, and sent down into a country district, without having a due sense of the great dignity with which they had been clothed; and so we find the Heralds particularly sensitive to any neglect or want of respect. There seems to be something in the profession of a Herald which makes him combative. It is impossible to read of Vincent and Brooke, Dugdale and Holme, or the remarks in Le Neve's works and numberless other quarrels, without coming to this conclusion. But the inquiry before us is—How, in all the senses of that word, were the Visitations conducted? and the character of individual Heralds seems subsidiary. It must be clearly borne in mind that their interests lay in recording the largest possible number of the gentry of a county; but the limits within which they must work were distinctly marked out for them, and every instinct of the dignity of their position, loyalty to their order, and fear of the consequences of any fault, constrained them to carry out their instructions fearlessly, which they certainly did. These jealousies and bickerings, which we know abounded between themselves, are a guarantee to us that rivals at the time were not able to substantiate any damaging accusations. Still the fact remains, and must be allowed for, that Heralds are apt to be irritable and quarrelsome; perhaps it is a tendency which comes with the accurate study of any exact science. In those who acknowledge only facts which have been proved, the introduction of one gritty grain of what is inexact immediately produces friction and consequent heat. But from whatever causes, and no doubt they came from both sides, we find in some counties, and more especially in the northern counties, where the correspondence is more fully known, that much angry feeling was aroused, the Heralds' authority was slighted, and their summons to appear greatly neglected. It is probable that in the earlier Visitations this was not the case. We can understand how families who had already once registered their descent, and had their arms duly entered, did not care to pay again thirty years or so afterwards; and some of these may have regarded the Heralds' Visitations as only a means of extorting money, overlooking the fact that they were the official registration of their legitimate descent, and consequent right to bear arms.

Much information on this point may be obtained from Mr. Rylands's 'Disclaimers at the Heralds' Visitations.* It is advanced, as if it were a known fact, that in many cases persons of substance on the list for the hundred were summoned who had never assumed to use arms. Thus (Gloucestershire Disclaimers 1682) Richard Tyler of St. Briavels says, "I know of no coat of arms belonging to me;" and William Davies, Clerk de Abenall, declares, "I know of no coat of arms belonging to me at present." Both were disclaimed. In the Visitation of Hereford, 1634,

* 'A List of Persons who were Disclaimed as Gentlemen of Coat-armour by the Heralds at the Visitations of the various counties of England, with an Introduction by John Paul Rylands, F.S.A. Guildford: printed by Billing and Sons, 1884.' 8vo. Of this work only one hundred copies were printed for subscribers.

James Lane, draper, who disclaimed for himself, "saith that Jonathan Wellington is a dark [i.e. blind] sickly man and no gentleman of coat armour." Both were disclaimed. In the Visitation of Worcester, 1634, "Thomas Simonds of White Lady Aston: I know none of right, and further saith that his father and grandfather were yeomen, and so writ themselves." Now this may mean that as a yeoman he ought not to have been summoned, or it may imply that he had used arms himself although he knew of no "right." He was disclaimed.

But in considering these complaints we must remember we have not heard and cannot arrive at the defendants' answers. It seems very hard if persons not making any pretensions to arms were summoned only because their wealth gave them a certain position as taxpayers, and were then proclaimed in the most public manner as ignobiles, i.e. not gentlemen of coat armour, in the neighbouring towns. But, after a careful examination, this seems to greatly overstate the case. Accidents of this kind must sometimes have been made, but we know that in those days, as now, it was looked upon too much as a venial offence to defraud the Government.

We find the List of Disclaimed at the Staffordshire Visitation, 1583 (William Salt Society, vol. iii., p. 14), thus headed: "The names of those that in the time of this Visitaeyon of Staffordshire have made noe proofoe of their Gentry, bearing noe armes, and yet, before tyme, had called and written themselves Gentlemen, and were therefore disclaymed in the chiefe places of the Hundreds wherein they dwell." Nothing could be more distinct. They had pretended and put themselves forward as gentlemen; that is, had borne and used arms before time. They could not, when called upon, shew any lawful right, and therefore they were disclaimed.

We know that the shields pulled down and defaced by the Heralds were set up again the moment their backs were turned. Dugdale notes pulling down a second time Cheshire arms which he had already destroyed ('Dugdale's Life,' Chetham Society, vol. lxxxviii., pp. 30-1);* and Mr. H. S. Grazebrook, in the Preface to the Staffordshire Visitation of 1663 (William Salt Society, vol. v., p. xi), says that "many, I may almost say most, of those who made no proof continued the use of the arms they claimed and displayed them without scruple on seals, furniture, etc."

In vol. v. of the William Salt Society, p. xii (footnote), are given the arms of several families on the county map in Plott's 'Natural History of Staffordshire, 1686,' which had been unproved or disclaimed at the

* At Chester, "where I pulled down those atchievements w<sup>h</sup> Holmes the paynter had set up again in S<sup>t</sup> John's Church for Alderman Walley w<sup>h</sup> I took down in A<sup>o</sup> 1644;" and again, pulled down and defaced those atchievements at Budworth "which Holme the paynter of Chester had hung up again for M<sup>r</sup> Marbury w<sup>h</sup> I puld down once before." ('Life of Sir William Dugdale,' by William Hammer, 4to, 1827.)

Visitations, and which were therefore still improperly put forward by these families, who persisted that they were gentry.

The fairest way to view the position of these complainants seems to be, if they made no claim to be gentlemen of coat armour, it was then but a very mitigated thing to complain of if their names should be published at the Market Cross as not belonging to the order of Heraldic Gentry, to which, as they declared to the Heralds, they did not aspire. They could readily attain that rank by applying for a grant; the sting of such publicity would lie in their having sailed about in stolen or usurped plumage, and then been exposed before their neighbours. The Heralds' position seems to be this: you are forbidden to use arms without due and proper right to them; we enter up and register the descents of all who apply, but we publicly notify those who have no right to coat armour; and thus it is that we find many genealogies entered in Visitations without any arms attached, and the names occur among the List of Disclaimers.

The privilege of bearing coat armour emanated only from the King by his appointed officers, and any person usurping such a privilege was guilty of fraud, and if he used the armorial bearings the property of any other family to which such appertained he was guilty of stealing. A coat of arms is an incorporeal hereditament vested in the descendants of the first acknowledged owner, and descending only to those who could prove their legitimate descent from him. There are instances, chiefly in the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries, of the rightful and acknowledged owner granting his coat of arms to some other individual, but they are so rare and of such a nature that we are obliged to regard them as the only exception to this law.* The heritable right in a coat of arms cannot be sold. With the above-noticed rare exceptions there is no title but of legitimate inheritance; this is plainly declared in the wording of all grants. Richmond alias Clarenceux, 9 Henry VII., grants "to William Gresene and to his posteritie he and they to have, occupie & inioye the same and therein to be revested at ther pleasures." (Harl. MS. 1115, fo. 3<sup>r</sup>.) Also in the same MS., fo. 6, Gueyenne, King of Arms, grants "to have, use & hold unto the said William Swayne and to the yssue &

* The following abstract from the College of Arms Register of Nobles and Gentles, vol. viii, p. 170*, is an interesting and late example of such a grant, and its acknowledgment by the College of Heralds.

"Austin, Garter, and Ward Clarenceux, 15 Aug. 1733, exemplified to Lord Anne Hamilton, Whereas Francis Edwards of Wellam, co. Leicester, was entitled to bear, Per bend sinister ermine and erminee, a lion rampant or, and for crest a lion's head enjayed and parted per bend sinister of the same, and upon his death the said arms descended to his only daughter and heiress Mary Edwards, who hath, by an Instrument dated 2 July 1733 under her hand and seal, assigned to Lord Anne Hamilton, 3<sup>d</sup> son of James, Duke of Hamilton and Brandon, now of Kensington, co. Middlesex, the said arms and crest to be borne by him and the heirs of his body," etc., etc.

procreation of his body lawfully begotten in all worship & gentleness everlasting."

Precisely the same line of law will now punish an individual who infringes a patent, or who makes use of the name of some well-known firm in order to get an advantage in business. The only difference is that in these instances the gain is in money, while in the Visitation times heraldic distinctions and the rank of gentleman which they brought were a social gain and in great estimation.

We have many instances of consideration and forbearance on the part of the Heralds. There are cases in which the scion of an ancient stock attended the Heralds and recorded his descent and arms, and was excused the fees on account of poverty; that is, more regard was paid to blood than position. In the Visitation of Hereford, 1634, we have "Charles Whitney of Norton to be spared for his name"; "Philips of Ashton to be spared from disgrace"; "Jno. Abrahall of Stoke Edith to be spared from disclaiming for his name's sake." In the Visitation of Worcestershire, 1634, "Thomas Wild to be spared from the Post"; "I have no interest in Arms, Edm<sup>d</sup> Boothby." He, one would suppose, should not have been summoned, but the Herald at the time had other facts before him and was not satisfied, for, he adds, "to be spared from disclaiming in regard of his being a souldier and of deserts."

The above quotations shew that the itinerant Heralds would in some cases have willingly shielded individuals, but the terms of their commission were inexorable; the rank of nobilis must be distinctly upheld; the mandate of the Earl Marshal's Court had gone forth—prove your lawful right to the arms which you have been using, or be disclaimed. And so we find all of those mentioned, Whitney, Philips, Abrahall, Wild, and Boothby, among Mr. Rylands's List of the Disclaimed. Any idea therefore that the Heralds could shield their own friends is quite inadmissible; the dignity of their commission surmounted all personal considerations, and its terms were strictly carried out.

In the Visitation of Worcestershire, 1682, "I, Joseph Ruthorn of Evesham, doe promise to forbear using any Coat of Arms untill I can make out what coat doth belong to me"—surely this implies that he had beforetime done so? Disclaimed 1682. Gloucester, 1623, "Rich<sup>d</sup> Warren of Stainton fawely usurped Arms which were defaced & he disclaymed"; "Edw<sup>d</sup> Hill Customer of Gloucester, neither gent. of Bloud Ancestry nor Arms." Edward Hopkins disclaimed at Boston, co. Lincoln, 1634, "an Usurper of Armes." Walter Cary of Wicomb (Visitation of Bucks, 1634), "no gent. nor hath any (right) to bear arms which he usurpeth"; and again (Visitation of Derby, 1634), "Robt Wilmott of Chadderton disclaimed for usurping the Title of Gent. notwithstanding having been disclaimed in the Visitation made 1611."

Every allowance was made for those who had difficulty in proving their right to the arms. The pedigree was entered and the arms respited for proof.* Mr. H. S. Grazebrook mentions (William Salt Society, vol. v., p. xi) the case of Amphlett, whose family had used arms which the Heralds said belonged of right to the name of Hastings. This was respited for proof, and, after suitable delay, proof to the satisfaction of the Heralds had not been shewn. This name, however, does not appear among the disclaimed, but the arms were not allowed.

Arms so respited were not publicly disclaimed at the Staffordshire Visitations of 1614 and 1663, although in many instances a note is made that nothing further had been done; and we notice that Dugdale at his Yorkshire Visitation of 1665 allowed two years to elapse before he proceeded to publish the lists of Disclaimed. In the Visitation of Hereford, 1634, occurs this memorandum: "John Philips of Ledbury to be disclaimed at our next 'sises because he was not disclaimed at our being in the country, being respited for prooffe, but cannot make any prooffe."

Again, in the Lancashire Visitation, 1613 (Chetham Soc., vol. lxxii., p. x), Winckley produced charters from a remote date proving his pedigree, "but because the legend on an ancient seal was partly defaced the arms were not allowed." Now this is a most unfair way of putting it. The deed in question (p. 35) to which this seal was attached was dated 50 Edward III.: "Adam filius Johannis de Winkley dedit et concessit Johanni filio Johannis de Bayly," etc. The seal shewed an eagle displayed, with the legend "Sigillum Johannis," and the rest is broken away. It certainly was not Adam's seal, it might have been his father's; but to those who know how often borrowed seals were used in charters it is quite plain that the Herald could never acknowledge a single occurrence of these arms and allow them to Winckley.

Taking the above view of the vested property of the rightful owners in heraldic bearings, we have many cases where similar want of sufficient proof caused their rejection. Page viii of the same volume: Travers brought evidences and muniments, but the two seals shewn led to a question which was the proper bearing, and it could not be decided.

At page x of the same Visitation Robert Holt of Stubble had married "an olde woman" and would not enter. The Heralds declared in 1613 that this family had no coat, although it was allowed by Flower in 1567.

* In our List of Disclaimed, 1623, three names are included, viz. Jobber of Helton, Moor of Muere, and Oakley of Oakley; pedigrees for these names, and with the arms, occur on pp. 274, 284, and 274, and there is nothing to shew that the arms were a later addition to our MS.

In this case there can be no doubt the legitimate descent from that member in 1567 was not clearly shewn to the Heralds, otherwise they had no power to refuse. The onus of proof lay with the claimant. It seems strange that Robert Holt should refuse to enter, and that a complaint against the Heralds should in after times be based thereupon. Again, Hindley produced evidences for three hundred years, but was not "allowed" arms. There are many instances of families who can shew much longer pedigrees and own considerable estates, but who cannot prove that they ever lawfully used arms. "Allow" has two meanings. The heraldic is "acknowledge," and this the Heralds could not do without satisfactory proof; the other sense is "permit," a sense excluded from all heraldic matters, which only deal with facts. We are obliged to expose the insinuation involved in that term. The only liberty left to the Heralds was that of judgment whether or not the facts adduced were sufficient to prove the claims. They had no choice of "allowing" in the charitable sense to "permit."

This naturally leads to the question, What proof was required by the Heralds before they would allow the arms? Of course a grant or proof that the Heralds had already allowed such to a direct legitimate ancestor, or as "their ancestral arms" to collaterals in a certain degree, was sufficient; or the grant by one who had the right thus to delegate his arms to another; there are such instances, as already noticed. Prescription with use by his ancestors was readily conceded when the arms were not those belonging to some other family. In the William Salt Society (vol. v., pp. x and 145) the Gaywoods of Bishops Offley in Staffordshire, who had been disclaimed in 1583, were allowed in 1614 a coat which was represented in an old window in Eccleshall Church, although the Visitation King makes a note at the time in the Visitation Book: "Care as to the coat of Gaywood, for, if they have right to bear three pheons, it must be by the interposition of a chevron argent, for so does the coat stand in the window of Eccleshall Church. Without a chevron it is the coat of Malpas." Woodhouse of Woodhouse (p. 327): "These arms were in an old glasse window of the church at Wombourne neere to the seat of this family in the same church, and likewise depicted on that seat." Stonyer of Biddulph (p. 282): "For proof he vouches y<sup>e</sup> picture of his great grandfather made in Qu. Eliz. time, on which these arms are."

The remarks of Sir Samuel Egerton Brydges on this matter of usage are very interesting (Collins's 'Peerage,' edit. Brydges, vol. i., p. 382, and they are quoted in a paper on "Proofs of Arms Required by Heralds," in the 'Herald and Genealogist,' vol. ii., p. 154):

"There is much more in the use of arms than light or interested critics in genealogy admit. When carried up to such a period as to be beyond memory it operates in the nature of prescription, and is of a directly opposite nature from a late assumption, where the want of authority is fatal to the right."

The following copy of a letter from Sir William Dugdale to Mr. William Horsley, 13 June 1668, will shew this clearly, and what was considered prescriptive right. The original is preserved in the Lansdowne MS. No. 870, and it is printed in the 'Retrospective Review' for 1827, p. 145:

"Therefore it will be requisite that he do look over his own evidences for some seals of arms, for perhaps it appears in them, and if so, and that they have used it from the beginning of Q. Elizabeth's reign, or about that time, I shall allowe thereof, for our directions are limiting us so to do, and not a shorter prescription of usage."

This was the spirit in which the Heralds approached the consideration of evidences laid before them; but the unwarranted assumption of arms was promptly met with all the weapons at their command, and properly so, for they had a duty to perform, viz., to protect the order of gentry, and to uphold the terms of their own commission under the great seal. Dallaway ('Heraldic Enquiries,' p. 308), says:

"It will strike an examiner of pedigrees to which no arms are attached that the families so degraded were not unfrequently of high ancestry and of extensive property in those counties where they are registered; and that the escutcheon disclaimed in a former was allowed and confirmed in a subsequent Visitation. This circumstance depended entirely upon the individual representative, who in some instances treated the Earl Marshal's summons with contempt, or at least with neglect. Their descendants are therefore excluded from armorial claims unless," etc., etc.

The Heralds underwent privations and labours, travelling through their district on horse-back, and stopping in country inns in those centres which seemed most convenient and where the neighbouring gentry could most readily wait upon them. The established scale of fees in their court was not excessive, and during the later Visitations, when expenses must presumably have increased, these must have been little more than sufficient to repay the labours and outlay of the Herald and his staff. Randle Holme, book i., chap. i., sec. 21, informs us that "the yearly Pention allowed them was Garter £40 per annum: Clarencieux and Norroy £20 each: six heraulds at £13 6s. 8d. apiece: four Pursevants having amongst them all £93 6s. 8d.:—anything beyond this arose from fees." We quote Randle Holme because he wrote in 1688, very near the time we are discussing, and he was well acquainted with all the facts. They came clothed with an authority so high, that it entitled them officially to every reasonable deference and respect. It is true their punishment for contempt was not prompt imprisonment and a fine, as with the Law Judges; but it reached forward for generations! If no member of a family would take the trouble, or let us say had the civility, to answer their summons and satisfy the representatives of the Earl Marshal, and indirectly of the reigning Sovereign, as to their right to use armorial distinctions and the title of gentry, which it was only in the power of the Earl Marshal, delegated to him by the Sovereign, to grant, or ratify and acknowledge; the verdict of the Earl Marshal's Court, the sole heraldic authority, could only take this form: "Such a one having been summoned before one of our principal officers and invited to explain by what right he is using certain ancient heraldry, and being unable to prove his descent and right thereto, and probably unwilling to expose his want of that right, is by us proclaimed ignobilis."*

To shew that this verdict could be reversed by properly and decently satisfying the constituted authorities and proving to them that the using was rightful, we print a curious Certificate by St. George, Norroy, extracted from Harl. MS. 1470 by Mr. H. S. Grazebrook in his Staffordshire Visitation of 1583, so frequently quoted (Wm. Salt Society, iii., p. 16, note):

"The King's most excellent Ma<sup>tie</sup> being desirous that ye Gentry of his Kingdom might be preserved in every degree, estate, etc., and to that end hath given full power and authority under the Greate Seale of England unto mee Richard St. George, Norroy King of Armes, not only to summon all the Gentlemen within my Province, but also to distinguish and make infamous by Proclamation all such as shall usurpe or take upon them the name of Esquire or Gentleman without just authority. And whereas Stephen Longsdon of Longsdon in co. Derby appeared before me in my Visitation and disclaimed the title of a gentleman under his hand, as not knowing how he might justifie the same, I proceeded against him according to my Commission. Since w<sup>ch</sup> tyme, he, making further enquiry, and finding that his Ancestors have been of long time reputed Gentlemen and borne Armes, w<sup>ch</sup> (as I am informed by some of good sort in the Countrey) he is able to prove by evidence and other good record, he hath desired me to affirm his right and publish the same. Wherefore these are to make knowne unto all manner of p<sup>er</sup>sons whatsoever that the said Stephen Longsdon may lawfully use and bear such armes and Crests as his Ancestors have done before him, and as he may lawfully justifie; And also that it shall be lawfull for him to beare the name title and dignity of a Gentleman in such manner and forme as any of his predecessors have done or as he may lawfully justifie. In witness whereof I the said Norroy King of Armes have sett to my hand and seale

* In Coke upon Lyttelton, ii., 667, the law is clearly laid down: "As in ancient [Roman] times statues or images of their ancestors were proofs of their nobility"—he quotes Juvenal, Sat. 8. and Cicero—"Nobiles sunt qui imagines generis sui proferre possunt, so in later times Coat armes came in lieu of those statues or images, and are the most certaine proofes and evidence of nobility and gentry, so as in these daies the rule is, Nobiles sunt qui insignia gentilitia generis sui proferre possunt." It thus follows that a man might be an Esquire, or a Knight, or even bear a title, and yet be ignobilis. We are accustomed nowadays to hear hard words against the Heralds of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. Students, regretful that vastly more has not come down to us in their Visitations, and descendants of some of the families, smarting under the results of the carelessness or insolence of the then representative of their family whose contempt of the duly constituted authority has robbed them of what they now feel would be of exceeding value, and further has cast a deep shadow of doubt over their heraldic rights. In several instances we know that this has so irritated the honest straightforwardness of this generation (we mention it with admiration and respect) that the present representatives have taken out new grants of arms rather than feel every time the carriage drove up to the door that they were shewing about the county heraldic pretensions to which they had no heraldic right.

The position of the Heralds in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries is unassailable and perfectly clear; legally and heralically they could have taken up no other ground. The value of their acknowledging and passing certain arms is in exact ratio to their known heraldic strictness. Descendants of the Disclaimed forget that if the Visitations had been conducted in a careless slipshod way, supposing for a moment such to have been possible with authorities so solemnly constituted, in that case the records they covet would not bear the sterling value placed upon those weighty records which we now possess. It is more just and dispassionate to acknowledge that the Heralds did all in their power, and, being human, they encouraged the gentry to come in with their fees and to shew such satisfactory heraldic proof as would confirm to them their proper social distinctions. To enable them to do this the Heralds warned them of their approach a month or so beforehand, and came down with books and attendants to their very doors. In order further to induce their attendance they had to proclaim that this inquiry was made to check the unlawful assumption of arms, and that such cases would be dealt with either by granting such honours to those who were worthy, or by publicly disgracing, and if necessary further proceedings in the Earl Marshal's Court against such impostors as had pretended falsely to heraldic rank. Would not the natural and honest course have been to assist the Heralds in the purging out of such offenders from the ranks of the gentry, and thus to enable them to purchase heraldic rights, and they enter among the ancient gentry and keep up the decaying numbers of a most important power in the state. It was a public benefit to expose and disgrace impostors so mean that they could flaunt in the absence of the Heralds heraldic pretensions, and sneak away when the approaching Visitation reminded them that they had for all these years been impudent cheats; they must now either honestly pay for and acquire the rights they had been dishonestly using, if the Heralds could see their way to make such grants, or else they must be put down into their real rank. It is no injustice to declare a man's real rank, nor does it cause any irritation unless his self-estimation exceeds his intrinsic value. In Heraldry there is no room for supposition; either a man is a gentleman of coat armour or he is not; he may be an equally respected and respectable yeoman; all the Heralds sought to establish was the truth.

Let us now try to discover by evidence what sort of reception and deference the Heralds received, and how they were seconded and assisted in this laudable work; and when putting it in this way we do not for a moment seek to conceal their desire to make it pay; they had heavy expenses to incur, their actual salaries were absurdly small, and of course a Visitation brought in fees both for registrations and grants; but the Earl Marshal's Court fixed when such were needful to keep together our heraldic annals, and the heraldic trust that was committed to its care. It gave the licence, but the expenses and financial results accrued to the individual Herald.

It is better for various reasons that we quote our facts in order of date, the advantage of which will appear when we come to consider further details. We must remember that the Heralds were few, and only occasionally do they express the indignation they felt at the neglect of their mission on the part of some of the gentry, or as they put it contempt of their office and position as representing the Earl Marshal, and through him their sovereign, the head of all heraldic distinctions. We know more of these matters as to Lancashire than the other counties; all the Visitations for that county having been ably edited for the Chetham Society, and we are thus able to give the following quotations from the 1533 Visitation; these shew that the Heralds were willing to accord every facility when they were civilly treated, and we would ask in common fairness, What could they do with such men as he who "wold not be spoken withall"?

In the Lancashire Visitation, 1613, we find (Chetham Society, vol. lxxxii., p. viii) Bradshaw of Bradshaw "produced two ancient letters, but the members referred to could not be placed in the pedigree." The Heralds therefore could only take the evidence before them.

Dugdale's Visitation, 1664-5, occurred at an unfortunate juncture. The feelings of rival parties ran high. Chetham Society, vol. lxxxiv., p. xiii: "The Puritans refused, the tribunal was considered by them expensive, arbitrary, and incompetent, Norroy himself being both judge and jury." He was a strong Royalist, and likely to regard critically those of the other side who in some cases perhaps had obtained grants during the Commonwealth times, and all of these had been declared only four years before to be null and void, and as if they had never been made. There was therefore sufficient material for friction on both sides. Dugdale had a duty to perform, those gentry whose position from any cause was doubtful contemned his authority, and a large portion of the county supported them in their attitude of heraldic rebellion; and this in a county where a strong feeling of the distinctions of rank was supposed to be and really did exist.

In Dugdale's Visitation of Yorkshire, 1665 (Surtees Society, 1859), we find the pedigrees of 472 families entered, and a long list of 257 disclaimers. At page xii we read: "It is evident the pride of family was wanting in Yorkshire, nearly one-third of the old gentry summoned treated the summons with neglect"; and at page xiv: "Mr. Robert Stafford of Thwing Dickering slighted the summons."

Certain accidents partly contributed to this neglect, for Mr. Charles Fairfax thus writes to Sir William Dugdale in June 1666:

"Some gentlemen will attend you at the next assizes to whom I gave notice: but many (not sensible of the honour of their families) I find remiss, yet hope (upon their better thought) they will do right to posterity and give their attendance. Your too short stay in your several circuits (and their coincident appearances upon summonses before the Deputy Lieutenants) they alledge for excuse they could not wait on you." (Hamper's 'Life of Dugdale,' p. 364.)

We may add as confirming the moderate tone of the Heralds and their anxiety to make as complete as possible their lists of gentry, that the resulting List of Disclaimed in Yorkshire was delayed for two years before it was proclaimed, in order to gather up any further gentry that might be persuaded to come in.

We would further refer to the Proclamation of Norroy, 2 February 17 Charles II., addressed to the Balive of the Hundred of Salford (quoted in the 'Herald and Genealogist,' vol. ii., p. 151, from the appendix to Mr. Ormerod's paper, "A Fragment Illustrative of Sir William Dugdale's Visitation of Lancashire"). Certain persons, "whose names were given in a schedule, had not made their appearance, and they were once more required and expected at the sign of the King's Head in Salford upon Saturday the 11th day of March following," etc. The schedule contained seventy-three names, and the result was that many obeyed this second request and entered their pedigrees.

"In the Heralds' College are some interesting letters addressed to Sir William Dugdale by gentlemen in Lancashire on the subject of this Royal Commission. Some, whose ancestors had long borne arms, disclaimed their right altogether; others stated that they were not entitled to any such distinction, not being 'Gentlemen;' and the friends of some courteously assigned reasons for the summons not having been obeyed, e.g., 'Mr Beswyke of Manchester is in Ireland,' 'Mr Alex Butterworth of Belfield is a young man on his travels, but will enter on his return home.' The Nonconformist families generally appear to have disdained the noble science, 'feeling assured' (as Macaulay in the 'Edinburgh Review' observes of the old Puritan) 'that if his name was not found in the Registers of Heralds it was recorded in the Book of Life, and hence originated his contempt for all terrestrial distinctions, accomplishments, and dignities.' It may, however, be easily inferred from his rough MS. notes, now in the College of Arms, that Dugdale's high notions, not only of the Royal prerogative, but also of his own office, led him in numerous instances to offend the prejudices of those whose views on both subjects were not exactly in accordance with his own. Of these the following is a specimen:

Mr James Halliwell of Pyke-house, his estate 200<sup>li</sup> per ann. 3 or
 'July 28 1666 4 Sons brought upp at University & some at Inns of Court, yett Hundesfield disclaymed under his hand rather than be at the charge. He is ritch and misserable & a Puritan withall.'

(Printed in the Chetham Miscellanies for 1851, being vol. xxiv. of the Chetham Society's Publications.)

Modern critics must acknowledge that the Heralds on their part did all they could to record full lists of gentry, and must feel that the default entirely rests upon those who refused to attend. In the 'Herald and Genealogist,' vol. ii., pp. 149-154, it is stated that "Some objected to the charges, and others had a total indifference to armorial distinctions. On one occasion few gentlemen appeared because there was a horse race at Brackley.* Such as came he (Sir Edward Bysshe, Clarenceux) entered if they pleased. If they did not enter, he was indifferent. So the Visitation was a trite thing, many looked on it as a trick to get money." Now as we read these facts the Herald and his staff attended at great personal labour, and he ran the risk of the fees ingathered not being sufficient to cover the expenses, which were relatively much heavier at these latest Visitations. Under such circumstances he could not be "indifferent." But the gentry did not realize their opportunity and the duty incumbent upon them to assist in upholding their social rank. Some names are returned as "extra com" or "hors du pays."

Mr. H. S. Grazebrook (Visitation of Staffordshire, 1583; William Salt Society, vol. iii., p. xiii) says: "Some men, no doubt, were too proud to have their ancient standing brought at all into question or to allow that it required recognition. Others were altogether careless and indifferent, and their tastes were for very different objects. Others would be absent from home at the time of the Heralds' circuit, or if summoned to attend them at a neighbouring town were possibly prevented by illness or indisposed by domestic sorrow and trouble;" and he refers to 'Herald and Gen.,' vol. vii., p. 47.

From whatever cause the following well-known names are among the defaulters in Staffordshire: Congreve, Wolsley, Sneyd, Fowke, Lane, Kynerley, Draycott, Chetwynd, Stanley, Skeffington, Swynfen, etc.

In Lancashire Ormerod remarks that Hulton of Hulton is only entered at the first and last Visitations, and Gerard of Bryn never appears.

Such names shew that although it is very pleasant to a family to find their descents duly recorded, still the absence of their name altogether from the list is no proof whatever that their social position and heraldic rights were not all the time perfectly well assured.

* Brackley is in Northamptonshire. We are not told at which Visitation this occurred. All Bysshe's Visitations were between the years 1662 and 1668, so late a date that even the character of such a man as Sir William Dugdale was unavailing. The constant devotion of the gentry to sports is advanced as a probable reason for their carelessly neglecting the summonses of Heralds; but we can only allow of this with serious reservations, because the Visitations were purposely fixed at those seasons when travelling across country roads would be practicable, viz. March to September, and this was not the time for sports. Except fishing and racing, nearly all sports were suspended during the spring and summer, which nature has set apart for the increase of the animal creation and the growth of its young; shooting and hunting therefore must always have ceased at the times of the Heralds' Visitations; and even hawking, for merlins get sick with moulting from March to August. Otters were sometimes hunted during the summer in order to exterminate them and their young.

We have left till now the scathing remarks of Blackstone ('Commentaries,' vol. iii., p. 105), because they refer to a time much later than the Visitations, when the Heralds and their science had sunk in public estimation (Blackstone wrote in 1765), and the rank of "gentleman" had then ceased to be an exact term. He says:

"The marshalling of coat armour, which was formerly the pride and study of all the best families in the kingdom, is now greatly disregarded, and has fallen into the hands of certain officers and attendants upon this Court, called Heralds, who consider it only as a matter of lucre and not of justice, whereby such falsity and confusion have crept into their records (which ought to be the standing evidence of families, descents, and coat armour) that though formerly some credit has been paid to their testimony, now even their common seal will not be received as evidence in any court of justice in the kingdom."

To us this is so evidently a contrasting of the "now," that is 1765, with the former condition of the Heralds' College, that it seems to have no reference to our subject; but since it has been introduced into the able paper in the 'Herald and Genealogist,' vol. ii., pp. 149-154, entitled "The Proofs of Arms required by the Heralds at their Visitations," we feel constrained to point out that this has no reference to the Heralds' Visitations, which are the ostensible subject-matter of that paper.

The quotation therefore which is put forward to depreciate the Heralds in Visitations tells quite the other way, for Sir William Blackstone* holds them up to reverence, and regrets the laxity which had brought about so striking a change in his own times. The writer of a more able paper in the 'Herald and Genealogist,' vol. vii., p. 46, had no difficulty in reading Blackstone's remarks as complimentary to the earlier Heralds.

We must make a further reference to this learned paper in the 'Herald and Genealogist,' vol. ii., p. 151, which says: "In 1661 Holme writes to Dugdale in behalf of a young gentlewoman, illegitimate, 'linked in affections' to a near relation of his own, 'not to a have a Batune crosse the coat,' but the colours in the arms to be changed; the fee offered is five pounds, though Holme suggests that the favour might be granted gratuitously" (Dugdale, 'Diary,' etc., p. 358); and a footnote: "The P.S. is amusing: 'There is an alderman's sone in Chester whose great-grandfather was base borne, whom I have bine treating with sev'all tymes about the alteration of his coat, telling him for 410, and not under, it may be accomplished; five he is willing to give, but not above; if y<sup>e</sup> please to accept of that sune y<sup>e</sup> may writt me a line or two.'"

Why seek to twist these round into an accusation against the Heralds, when the meaning is quite obvious; these persons were to apply for new grants of arms, and they were anxious only that under the circumstances such might be obtained, and on the most favourable terms.

* See also Cruise on 'Dignities and Titles of Honour,' 1810, chap. vi., sec. 62, where it is laid down that the official Records of the Heralds' College are accepted as evidence.

In very early times bastardy was thought little detriment. Public opinion progressed, and both heraldry and the law continued throughout to draw their marked distinction against it. Now we see in 1661 the baton sinister had become too palpable. They sought for some less conspicuous brand, and would sooner have a new coat altogether than continue the ancient arms with a stain upon them. Better to appear as a novus homo than bear the ancient arms with a blot which public opinion understood and noticed. See the grant to Harriot Eliot, 16 July 1726, printed in the 'Miscellanea Genealogica et Heraldica, 1868, vol. ii., p. 43. Her maiden name is not given; she was the natural daughter of the Right Hon. James Craggs, Secretary of State. She would not impale with her husband's coat armour that which was branded, and so she applied for and received a new coat altogether.

We now come to consider the frequent errors observed in Visitation pedigrees. We quite endorse what is said in the Chetham Society's vol. lxxxviii., p. 40: "The pedigrees ought most assuredly to be received with great caution, and few of them to be regarded as indisputably correct unless tested by documentary evidence." This is simply the result of unskilful or careless genealogists who, when preparing their papers in anticipation of the Heralds' Visitations, had not the necessary documentary evidences supplied to them. The wills and other sources of information, now so accessible, enable us to supplement and correct statements which they drew up in all honesty, from such materials as they had at their command. What is a matter of much astonishment in many Visitations is the strange omissions to be found in pedigrees which are signed as correct by the heads of the families; the maiden names of their wives or mothers are frequently wanting. Mr. H. S. Grazebrook (in the William Salt Society, vol. iii., p. xiii; also vol. v., p. xii) points to some remarkable instances which the Heralds could easily have filled in at the time by verbal inquiry, and goes on to remark that the Heralds who were enjoined in their Commissions not only to peruse and take knowledge of all manner of arms, but also to note the descents, pedigrees, and marriages of the nobles in their provinces, paid far more attention to the heraldry than to the genealogical part of their duties. The editor of the Lancashire Visitation, 1613 (Chetham Society, vol. lxxxii.), advances a most extraordinary statement (p. vi), that river roce evidence was the general practice at Visitations—we give the exact quotation, "which was the general mode of taking information at the Visitation;" and again at p. viii, "parole evidence," etc., etc., and thus seeks to account for many deficiencies and mistakes; but we cannot accept this. The Visitation which follows his Preface contains many long pedigrees which alone would refute his suggestion, and a glance at our Shropshire MS. of 1623 shews many long pedigrees most carefully drawn up and including all the branches of ancient and widely extended families. We would also refer to page 125 of our Visitation; two accounts of the ancient descent of the Cole family were submitted: there were no evidences to shew which was the correct one, and so the Heralds entered both and joined on at foot the more modern portion of which they were assured.* The fact is that some knowledge of Heraldry, and as a consequence the rudiments of descent, was considered at the time of which we write a part of every gentleman's education; no man could be Peacham's Complete Gentleman without knowing of all manner of sports, etc., also the blazoning of arms, etc. In almost every old country house a pedigree, drawn in many cases in Elizabeth's time, is to be found, and only occasionally are they signed by a Herald. The interest felt in such social rank produced men in every district who made it their business to draw pedigrees, and no doubt the announcement of an approaching Visitation set them busily to work. We know from Robert Greisbrook's letter, 1662 (Wm. Salt Society, vol. v., p. 156), that he at once wrote to Mr. Kirke, an arms painter in Lichfield. These pedigrees contain sometimes the emblazonments. One "John Caine of Oswestry," who flourished at the time of our 1623 Visitation, skilfully illuminated the Heraldry, and there were many such working Heralds while Visitations lasted. Dugdale would have spoken of them as "Paynters," and their work was regarded with suspicion by the College of Heralds as trenching upon their privileges; but the requirements of the gentry called them into existence and supported them, and it is hard to see how the Heralds' Visitations could have been carried out without the collective labours of such men. The progress of a Herald on Visitation was necessarily hurried; he had a great space to cover and many families to enter up, and had to fulfil his duties with critical care, as his decisions would govern the College ever after. We find that Dugdale and his staff took and entered thirty-two pedigrees on one day at Lichfield on 30 March 1663 (Wm. Salt Society, vol. v., p. xii, note), the first day of his Visitation; no wonder that

* How the Hall Pedigree at pp. 205-7 passed the Heralds must ever remain a matter for astonishment and regret. Since our work was in the press, an article has appeared on this subject in 'Northern Notes and Queries' for December 1888 (vol. iii., p. 89).

† He was a poet and genealogist; see references in 'Byegones relating to Wales and the ... Counties' for 1882, pp. 1, 3, 6, 8, 12.

In the 'Visitation of London, 1633,' i., p. 248, the pedigree of Edwards of Oswestry appears with this note: "The descent set forth by John Caine of Oswalestre 1639." Many such descents were drawn by him about this time.

omissions might escape notice which it would have involved great labour afterwards to supply. There is remarkably little cause to complain of such omissions in our present Visitation, for, except in the fragmentary pedigrees which occur here and there, the great bulk are very fully given.

The names of places are as usual difficult. This arises from three causes: firstly, they spelled phonetically, and any oral information collected either by heralds or painters was thus liable to strange aberrations; secondly, the modern spellings have settled down into different forms, such as "Bechfield," now "Bettisfield," etc.; thirdly, errors in transcribing from writing, which was very likely indistinct to begin with, and bad writing of that date may often be read several ways, and especially as the Heralds were not likely to know the small hamlets in Shropshire. It is noticeable that there are in our county many places bearing the same name. The most remarkable instance is Eyton; under its various spellings of "Eyton," "Eaton," and "Eton," there are eight hamlets of this name in Shropshire, while in the neighbouring counties, which might easily occur in our Visitation, there are two in Herefordshire and four in Cheshire. Five separate Shropshire families of the name bear different coat armour for Eyton. This name is also vulgarly spoken of as "Yutton," "Yeaton," and "Yetton." As an example of these difficulties, how could one unacquainted with the facts recognise Kenilworth when spelled "Killingworth," or "Up-a-tree," as given in the Visitation of Devonshire, for Up-Ottery.

By carefully searching out the earliest notices, and in some cases finding the original grants, we have striven to arrive at the correct blazons and names of quarterings. The custom of families in Wales and the border lands is to retain the arms of their distinctive or favourite ancestor, no matter what changes the surname may have undergone, and it was hardly possible to give in shields of quarterings the exact surname under which these happened to be brought in; the original bearer has in these cases been given. With Papworth's valuable book at hand nothing would be easier, but we have refrained from naming any quartering unless, by tracing out the exact connection or finding satisfactory authority elsewhere, we could ensure accuracy. Mistakes in the tinctures frequently creep in from careless painting or re-painting over faded colours. The long list of arms formerly painted up in Ludlow Castle, and printed from the MS. pence John Mytton of Halston in 'Documents connected with the History of Ludlow, collected by the Hon. R. H. Clive' (Van Voorst, 1841), is most incorrect on this account. Monuments in churches for the same reasons frequently undergo startling changes.

White becomes yellow with age and is re-painted or; blue turns black, or in some instances fades altogether; while in some cases red, from atmospheric causes, will shew as a distinct green or black until the careful scratching off of a small portion shews the red below; green again turns to black. But it is hard to say what changes differently compounded oil-paints would assume if exposed, as the Bold memorials at Farnworth Church, Lancashire, to all the chemical fumes of Widnes. Of all the heraldic evidences left to us painted monuments are, for these reasons, the most unreliable. Emblazonments in water colours, on the other hand, never fade into contradictory tinctures, nor does stained glass change colour, although the order of the marshalling is frequently found to have been altered. In the tricking of coats of arms some Heralds have hastily written "gules" in such a way that it is often hard to say whether "Gu." or "Sa." is intended, and a careless reading would be sure to select the wrong tincture.

In conclusion, let us give the exact words of quaint old Fuller (1648, 'Profane State,' cap. xiv., ed. 1840, p. 332) from the end of his description of the "Degenerous Gentleman": "Within two generations his name is quite forgotten that ever any such was in the place, except some Herald in his Visitation pass by and chance to spell his broken arms in a church window. And then how weak a thing is Gentry, than which IF IT WANTS VIRTUE, brittle glass is the more lasting monument."

Disclaimers 1623.

[Shrewsbury MS.]

The Kings Most Excellent Majesty being desirous that nobility and gentrie of this his Realm should be preserved in every degree as well in Honour as in Worship, and that every Person and Persons, bodies politique, Corporate, and others should be known in their Estates and mysteries without confusion and disorder: hath authorized us Robert Treswell, Esq., Somerset Herald, and Augustine Vincent, Rouge Croix, Officers of Arms, as Marshalles and Deputies to Clarenceux King of Arms of the South parts of this Realm of England, not only to visit all this county of Salop, to peruse and take knowledge, survey, and view of all manner of Arms, Cognizances, Crests, and other like devices, with the notes of the Descents, Pedigrees, and Marriages of all the Nobility and Gentry therein throughout contained, but also to reprove, controule, and make infamous by proclamation all such as unlawfully and without just Authority, vocation, or doe calling do, or have done, or shall usurpe or take upon him or them any name or Title of Honour or Dignity as Esquire or Gentleman or other: as by his Highness gracious Commission under the great seal of England more plainly may appear. Know ye therefore that we the said Somerset and Rouge Croix, for the accomplishment of his Majesties desire and further of his Highness Service that way, at this present making Sarvey within the said County, have found these Persons whose names are under written presumptuously without any good ground or Authority to have usurped the name and Title of Gentlemen contrary to all right and to the Ancient Custome of this Land and the Usage of the Law of Arms, which name and Title they are from henceforth no more to use or take upon them upon such further paine and perill as by the Right Hon<sup>ble</sup> the Earl Marshal of England shall be inflicted and laid upon them. Whereof also we thought good hereby to advertise all others his Majesties good and Loving Subjects that as they tender his Highnesses Pleasure and desire in this behalf they from Henceforth shun and avoid the like and forbear to use in any writing or otherwise the addition of an Esquire or Gentleman unless they be able to stand unto and Justifye the same by the Law of Arms and the Law of the Realme. Given at Brugenorth the 20th Day of Septemb<sup>r</sup> A° D<sup>i</sup> 1623 in the 21st year of the Reign of our most gracious Sovereign Lord James, by the Grace of God King of England, France, Ireland, defender of the faith, etc. . . . * Sir Edward Burnell, temp. Edw. I., bore: Argent, a lion rampant sable crowned or (Milit. Summonses). On 20 October 1396 a plea of arms for this coat was prosecuted by Sir John Lovel, as heir-general of the Burnells, against Sir Thomas Morley (Blomfield's 'Hist. of Norfolk,' vol. I., pp. 6 and 675). The evidence shews that Sir Philip de Burnell bore these arms and had issue Sir Edward Burnell, Knt., who died without issue, leaving Maude his sister and sole heir; she married Sir John, Lord Lovel, and had a son, Sir John Lovel, the plaintiff.

* This word is the same in the copy of the Visitation in the College of Arms (Mr. H. Farnham Burke, Somerset Herald). Arms such as are here described were borne by families named Bray, Barkley, Hellera, and Blundeville. Mr. Heygate of Oaklands states that a family of Bray lived until twenty years ago, in reduced circumstances, at Ducklow. Their last freehold farm was sold about 1850, and they had been there for three or four generations, perhaps earlier.

Fredericus de Halle natus in vrbe de Halle in Comitatu Tyrolis, filius naturalis Alberti, et gubernatur Comitatus Tirolis, propter audaciam et ferocitatem appellatus Draco de Halle, vindicator necis patris occiso Johanne patrudi, tandem ab Alberto fratre vna cum vxore et sex liberis in inferiorem Germaniam relegatus vbi cum Joh'e Duce Brabantino gratiam iniit, et ab eo adiutus: postea plenus annorum a Leopoldo nepote revocatus in Austriam cum ipso ab Helvecijs trucidatur, a<sup>o</sup> setatis 99, duxit Ingelburgam filiam Comitis de Nassaw.

Henricus Halle Eques auratus magister equorum cum Ric'o secundo obiit apud Rosse in Hiberniæ.
Margaritta fil. Johannis d'Eureux fr'is Caroli Regis Navarrae.
Ludouicus Halle Ep'us Hereford.

* Sir Frank Van Halen, K.G., did not marry the wife here assigned to him, and had not the children here named. He was a Brabanter, and lies buried in St. Bombeut's Malines, having died in 1375. The arms used by his immediate descendants were: Gules, a lion rampant or crowned azure. Sir Frank owned estates near Malines, and his descendants have been recorded clearly in the Rev. A. W. Cornelius Hallen's 'Account of the Family of Hallen' (Edinburgh, 1885). It is only necessary further to say that the Garter plate attached to his stall, which bears the arms here passed by Vincent, is clearly of the time of Henry VIII., perhaps a few years before 1547. See Belts's 'Memorial of the Order of the Garter,' pp. 123, 125, 127.

Hall of Northall.*

ARMS: Harl. 1241.—Quarterly: 1 and 4, Gules, a wyvern with wings expanded or, within a bordure azure, thereon eight lions passant and as many fleurs-de-lis alternately of the second; 2 and 3, Argent, on a pile gules a crescent or [CHANDOS].

CREST.—Upon a [castle with four towers argent], † a wyvern anle, gulle gules, collared and lined . . . holding in the dexter claw a sword argent, hilt and pomel [or].

David Hall of Northall in—Plotica [felices] da. & coher. to Robt Chandours Kynersley in com. Salop. of Stanton in com. Cambridg.

* We learn from Wood's 'Athens Oxon.' that Edward Hall the Chronicler, who died 1547, was a son of John Hall of Northall. He is supposed to have been the inventor of the earlier portion of the pedigree given on pp. 306 and 308, and probably of the coat armour. The above pedigree of four generations seems to be authentic, and it is the only portion recorded in the Brewebery School Copy of this Visitation.

† In Brewebery MS. the wyvern stands only upon a cushion lying on the torse.
